

TALENT QUEST

Recruitment Academy staff are trained to recognise talent

Recruitment Academy is the first induction, training and placement institution of its kind in Australia. It offers a unique service to the recruitment industry for both clients and candidates.

From day one, Recruitment Academy has sought to improve the service delivery and performance standards of new consultants by giving a solid understanding of recruitment and confidence, ultimately delivering high quality candidates to the industry and enhancing the industry's reputation to build a stronger sense of professionalism from within.

The bedrock of Recruitment Academy is our team of expert recruitment and training professionals based in Melbourne, Sydney and Brisbane. Our in-depth knowledge of the industry is of a calibre that can only be obtained from on-the-ground experience in recruitment. In the evolving recruitment market, the challenge to win the war for talent is constant, as is being a step ahead of the competition. The induction, training and placement services offered by our experts will help ensure that our clients attract the right people who can deliver from day one, creating a solid foundation to achieve their strategic, financial and cultural goals. Recruitment Academy's founder and managing director, Michael Dimopoulos has over 10 years of industry experience in Australia, Hong Kong, Singapore and the UK. His career is more than a mere success story; it is a testament to his dedication and commitment to the industry — a dedication he is driven to pass on, by attracting quality people to the industry. The face of the Australian recruitment industry

RECRUITMENT — INDUSTRY OF CHOICE
Established in early 2006, Recruitment Academy was born out of the desire to create a bridge between those who have the drive, energy and resilience to forge a career in the recruitment industry and recruitment firms seeking passionate, motivated industry professionals.

has seen unprecedented change and growth. Various factors have combined to make recruitment an appealing industry for ambitious candidates, but arguably the biggest influence in this decade has been the global labour shortage. Michael recognises that the recruitment industry has not been spared from the shortage of quality consultants. In recent times our clients have been focusing strongly on experienced recruiters, but those serious about being seen as an employer of choice are now also attracting candidates with industry specific backgrounds who have the attributes of a successful consultant.

Recruitment Academy's candidates entering the industry for the first time come from all industry backgrounds, such as IT, banking, accounting, legal, hospitality, trade, management, health, FMCG and education. Recruitment Academy is ready to raise the bar once again with plans for the launch of an on-line induction course, e-nduction, and candidate board e-Graduate, which is well in development.

Agencies will be able to engage our graduates over the internet, access their online profiles, download live interview footage and coordinate interview times through the Academy portal, confident in the knowledge that they will be taking on a fully prepared recruitment industry professional.

This innovation will not only be an industry first but will be far more effective than current industry sourcing arrangements and less risk to both the candidate and client.

Our goal is to make the recruitment industry a better place to work for employees; to help in-house HR improve its return on investment and to offer recruitment agencies access to talented and inducted consultants who are productive from their first day on the job.
